THE TEAGLE CLAN REUNION

ed note

We do not usually publish articles concerning private celebrations. However, our climate has affected our activities in the recent weeks of smoke and fire warnings. This article expresses perfectly the attitude and gratitude of staff and residents who had a change of venue (to the meeting house) and enjoyed their well planned visit. It didn't close us down!

ASR

All of the Teagle family, and their hangers-on, would like to thank all of the residents and employees who made the Teagle reunion a complete success in spite of the problems that arose due to the ever present smoke. Some comments that were heard went like this: "Everybody is so friendly!" To which we replied, "Well, that's the way it is here." Or, "Is the food always this good?" And we replied, "Yes, Helen White and her crew always come up with delicious meals, as well as beautiful decorations."

And when we had to move operations from the West Parlor to Meeting House we heard, "What a lovely facility, and the wait-staff were so efficient that the whole program went smoothly." Some attendees were disappointed that you have to be sixty-five in order to live here. We explained that aging does have some benefits.

A Round And Around

By Joan Smith

ed. note

Carolyn Sanders has saved this item for 36 years. Joan Smith, the author, gave Carolyn permission to send it in for publication. Originally it appeared in the Piedmont, California, Community Church Bulletin. Keep caring, sharing, living, loving.

ASR

FROM FRERE JACOUES through Row Row Your Boat, we have all sung rounds at composition in which a progression of words and music returns finally to the starting point. Any number can play. You can pick up the tune at any convenient time, and continue with the singing until you come to the end, and everyone else has finished before you, or with you, or after you. It is a very fulfilling sort of venture, marked by freedom and vigor-but nevertheless contained and going 'round and 'round.

It hadn't occurred to me that there could be a Round done with the written word. Leave it to Hallmarkthat organization which creates greetings in good taste. Their paper sack for carrying home their cards from the store contains a wonderful "Round." Across the top it reads, "Caring is the art of Sharing." Down the right side it says, "Sharing is the art of Living." The bottom tells us that "Living is the art of Loving," and the left side finishes with, "Loving is the art of Caring." What a lovely round! Caring-sharing-living-Loving-caring-sharingliving-loving-on and on, 'round and 'round. To round is to bring to completeness.

We hear all too often around holiday time that we are so busy we run in circles. Sharing-living-lovingcaring would be a marvelous circle to run in. If you feel caught on an endless merry-go-round at this time of year, make it a round of loving-living-sharing-caring. The joyous thing about a round is that you can hop on anywhere, and "the course will end where it began."

There are lots of ways of thinking of round— as in a round of pleasure, surely a feature of the Season. Round means full and complete. Round means Finished, polsome time. Musically, a round is a ished. We can give a round of applause. But to me, the unique thought behind the Hallmark Sack design is perfect for the Season. Think again of the round of livingloving-caring-sharing- a great thought for the new year when someone says, "See you around."
